Bay Area's largest indoor tennis complex in V-W plant

Tennis entrepreneur Pietro Denevi and real estate developer Anthony Martino have leased the long-vacant Volk-swagen warehouse at confluence of two freeways in Pleasanton, and will open a private racquet club there next month.

The 140,000 square foot building, empty for more than two years, will be called Ten-nis Town. It will house 20 indoor courts. Ten more will be constructed on the grounds outside.

Manager Sharon Season of

Foster City said Friday that the club will officially open Oct. 4. Four courts will be ready for play the last week of Denevi and Martino, partners in the Bayside Racquet Club on the peninsula, plan to sell 1,000 memberships in this new venture.

Members will be assessed an initial $50 fee, plus monthly dues. Those will vary depending on family size. For instance, a single membership will cost $25 per month, or $40 per couple.

The announcement comes on the heels of a recent decision by the Alameda County Fair to operate an indoor tennis complex at its Young California Building. That four-court operation would be open to the public.

Denevi and Martino, equal partners in the Tennis Town complex, have operated the Bayside Racquet Club jointly since 1974. Martino, 52, was a mobile home park developer back in the 1960's.

He is a former professional baseball player, and has coached sports in Northern California high schools for the past 20 years.

Redevelopment story

Rebuilding the Old Town core

First of a series

The City of Pleasanton might become the 144th city in the State of California to have a Redevelopment Agency and Plan, and if the successes of other municipalities are any guide, the whole city should benefit.

Its effect on surrounding areas not in the Redevelopment Agency is an unknown factor, but other Bay Area cities have revitalized areas by building new parking structures, redirecting traffic and to incrorate the proposed Stone regional shopping cen-ter, the sports ground and downtown Pleasanton and finance the development of the last two areas with the taxes from the first.

By definition, all the taxes in a redevelopment area (over and above the taxes collected the year before the agency was formed) go into the coffers of the redevelop-

This is called tax increment financing, and the only disadvantage results because the taxes collected by other agencies remain at the base year level, regardless of the following development. Thus, any taxes from the proposed shopping center will go to the redevelopment agency and not to the other taxing agencies. Although the school districts do not suffer by the lost revenue, according to John Bowling of the redevelopment agency, other agencies must spread the lost revenue throughout the rest of their jurisdiction.

However, the benefits that accrue inside the redevelopment area are impressive. Walnut Creek, for example, sold bonds against the projected tax increment income and since 1971 has revamped much of the downtown area.

A multi-story parking lot is going in, Bullock's, a three story office building and a classy restaurant have all moved into the area, and traffic has been rerouted to make it more attractive for customers to come to downtown Walnut Creek.

As a result, the new Walnut Creek is a thriving, bustling commercial center that has started to win back some of the customers it lost when the mammoth Sun Valley Shopping Center was built in Con-

In fact, a new redevelopment area is now being eyed for impr ovement, and tax inthrough Redevelopment crement financing will once more be traded off for bonds to fund the work.

The City of San Pablo, one of the most depressed and deteriorating areas in Contra Costa County just a decade ago, developed perhaps the most original plan to finance its redevelopment.

The city traded bonds with landowners of abandoned businesses within the redevelopment area for land, and then turned around and sold that land to large chains to finance the rest of the project.

One of the keys to the suc-cess of San Pablo's plan was massive citizen involvement, and not only have the two projects projects proved well-designed and profitable, but civic pride has jumped a little as well.

Pleasanton will receive some $30,000 in federal money on that basis, while Pittsburg (in Contra Costa County with a population of 25,000) will receive nearly $3 million.

Pleasanton's plan most closely resembles Walnut Creek's.

If the city can somehow overcome the massive public resistance to the plan, Pleasanton can join the rapidly growing number of California cities that have helped themselves rejuvenate through re-

Lie detector tests taken by Spiliotopoulos, deputy

County Planning Commissioner Geroge Spiliotopoulos has voluntarily taken a polygraph — lie detector — test in sheriff Tom Houchin's investigation of the 35-year-old for-mer Pleasanton City Councilman's charges that deputies beat and battered him about at the Santa Rita county jail July 28.

Spiliotopoulos could not be reached for comment, but The Times has learned that at least one of the deputies involved in the fracas also has

PLEASANTON — City council will continue to Aug. 25 consideration of a rate increase for the Pleasanton Garbage Service and hear information on the proposal at its meeting tomorrow at 8

A report by the city manager states that the current civic center is rapidly becoming "if not already" too small for current staff needs.

Completed in 1974, the civic center was intended to be an interim facility to house then existing staff "until such time as a permanent civic center could be constructed." The report states that a permanent facility was not expected to be needed for five or ten years, "or until the regional shopping center (Stoneridge) was completed.

The report said that the current space problem was brought on by the authorized hiring of a deputy city attorney, and further states that four alternatives to remedy the situation exist:

Expansion of the current city office building;

Leasing a relocatable building, estimated to cost

Lease commercial office space - costing between $4,680 to $5,040 per year; Use of trailers as tempo-

Sounds so bright, so confident. Until the time comes to face the decisions: WHAT college? Are there scholarships? Is it worth going into debt over? What kind of career do I want?

Then, it can be panic time. Remembering their own high-school and college days, their own mistakes and lucky breaks, local American Association of University Women members hope to take the misery out of one of life's biggest decisions: whether, when, where to go to college. They've launched phase one of an ambitious project: working with high-school counselors to help students learn about not only Califor-nia colleges but out-of-state schools they may not have considered and land scholar-

The first evidence Livermore students and parents will get of the project is a long booklet which will arrive in the mail about October.

Patterned after a booklet put out by the Amador High counseling staff in Pleasanton. Livermore's version will have sections on "How to choose a college," "Visiting a college campus," "College entrance tests," "Financial aids and scholarships."

Although inspired by AAUW, the booklet will actually be the joint enterprise of four high-school counselors who specialize in assisting college-bound students: Art Ackerman and Everett Eckersley at Livermore High, Keith Cariveau and Florence Shepherd at Granada.

The high schools have actually been sending home information like this with students in the form of news-letters" pointed out AAUW's Renee Smith, chairman of the current effort. 'But now it will be all together, in booklet form, convenient to use and much less likely to get lost."

"AAUW will be giving the district a grant to pay for printing and mailing it out to about 3,000 homes of juniors and seniors.

From her perspective, Val-ley residents are satisfied with the California system of junior colleges, colleges and universities, and seldom consider the fact that other schools in the country may offer a better specialty program (Northwestern for jour-nalism, for example, or Harvard for law.) "It may seem expensive," she says. "But every college has various kinds of scholarships, grants and loans. People should at least look into it, and maybe they will, now that they know where to come."

AAUW's members in the Valley come from more than 100 non-California colleges as well as most of the state campuses. Add to that the alma maters of their husbands, and there's a long list of alumni around who would be delighted to talk about the good and bad sides of their schools, show pictures, share a cata-

And that's Phase Two of the AAUW project: Making that long list of Valley college graduates available to local students.

Several members are now involved in asking each member, and her husband, whether they would like to be included in the "resource list" they are drawing up.

If it's ready in time, the list will be included in the autumn booklet. If not, it will be available a bit later in the year but in any case it will probably become an annual event.

The Marshalls maintain an eminent

By JEAN McKENNA
High on a hill, behind a great wall, a tradition is lovingly

Commanding a view of the great ranges of the East Bay region even more sweeping than that enjoyed by the legendary Hearst Dude Ranch, the Marshall estate is set like a jewel among the Pleasanton foothills. It is enclosed by a concrete retaining wall of huge and forbidding proportions, but the function of the wall is to hold the estate grounds up, not to keep people out.

Not far from the site chosen by Phoebe Hearst for the Hearst ranch at the turn of the century, the estate is actually located on acreage once owned by the Hearst family, now the exclusive Castlewood residential area surrounded by the Castlewood Country Club golf course.

Although it incorporates furnishings and accessories from the original Hearst ranch, the individual uniqueness of the Marshall home is a world away from the style of Phoebe Hearst. Yet John Marshall speaks with great respect and admiration of Phoebe's unbounded generousity and lavish hospitality.

An ardent desire to sustain that worthy tradition of generous hospitality is perhaps the reason for the creation of the Villa del Sole and the present lifestyle of John and Ed-

From the Oriental opulence of filigree and inlay of the Jade Room to the whimsical imprint of Big Foot along the trail through the Redwood Forest, details of the Marshall home seem designed just to delight the visitor. Even frequent visitors to the showcase mansion find some fresh surprise at each visit.

Each of the three bedrooms is an incredible elaboration

Earthtones of embossed leather, dark Haitian sculpture, coppered nails and animal furs accentuate the jungle theme of the Copper Room. Polish onyx and jade piecss, set like a million eyes in the ceiling of the Jade Room, are duplicated in the feathery "eyes" of the peacock headboard. The glitter of the glass-jewelled ceiling casts multi-colored patterns on the ivory tones of appointments in

Outside a serpentine balustrade of concrete wraps itself around the terrace with thousands of flowering plants and giant palms mirrored in the swimming pool. At night, multi-colored lights and torches show-off details of the garden - a clever adaptation of sophisticated lighting effects at

The atmosphere of house and garden recall lines of poetry — "In Xanadu did Kublai Khan a stately pleasure dome decree" — and the estate is indeed more in the realm of fantasy. Yet the house is very much lived-in, and very liveable as well!

John Marshall explains that the house is designed on the principle of the illusion of space, and then points out the many sublte features which create the impression of a home much larger than the actual eight and a half rooms. Square corners have been eliminated in the three octagonal bedrooms, featuring large windows and hidden closate creating into a central fover with a high dome. No ets, opening into a central foyer with a high dome. No doors are visible, but wide doorways allow a view of the full-length of each room.

Standing in the living room, one is offered vistas in all directions through sliding glass doors — an outdoor cactus garden on one side, and the Hamilton Mountain Range far beyond on the other side.

The kitchen is a paragon of efficiency, with smooth-rolling drawers, sliding shelves, lighted cabinets and handy places to step-up to reach higher shelves.

Twelve hundred glasses are cleverly hidden in a cabinet above the wet-bar in the kitchen.

What is most amazing about this incredible home is the fact that nearly every unique feature, from basic layout to filigree detail, was conceived and executed by the owner himself (on the advice of the mistress of the house, of

Yet neither the intricate artwork nor the practical innovations come as a surprise given John Marshall's back-

His skills in carving, lapidary, concrete sculpture, mosaics and goldleaf techniques are founded in his education at the California College of Arts and Crafts. John's ornate roccocco taste was perhaps acquired on his many travels where he was exposed to the Tuscan style of Italy, the Andalucian style of Spain and Oriental art.

For many years as a young man John Marshall managed his own construction and architectural business, specializing in Italian and Spanish style mansions for the elite of Oakland's Rockridge district. His great financial

A glimpse at the home of Edith and John

success in this business is tribute to his mastery of home

A successful entrepreneur from an early age, Marshall several times earned a fortune on his reputation as a superb host. In the 1930's he built and managed a dude ranch resort on Pyramid Lake in Nevada which drew movie stars, governors and even President Herbert Hoover to its modest but impeccable accommodations. Marshall later acquired the Hearst's dude ranch in Pleasanton and, working 19 hours a day, created a resort to which vacationers and conventioneers flocked.

Proud of his achievements in business, John is a tease when asked about his private life. How did he, a well-heeled and worldly-wise bachelor, meet and fall in love with Edith, a spirited teacher from a farm in Modesto? An amused wink is the reply.

Edith Marshall, attractive and quiet-spoken, graciously defers to her husband in conversation. She must be coaxed into talking of herself, but eagerly confesses her great enjoyment of gardening—"She reads a seed catalogue like a popular novel," says John.

Each season she plants hundreds of flowers, and tends a popular novel," says John.

Each season she plants hundreds of flowers, and tends a huge garden of vegetables and fruits. Hand in hand with her love of gardening goes Edith's talents as a cook. She cans and preserves a huge volume of home-grown strawberries, raspberries, pajas, peas, beans.

Edith, too, delights in entertaining. She enjoys cooking gourmet dishes for dinner guests, and even a casual visitor often goes home with a gift-pak of jams and jellies from the Villa Del Sole. Her love of poetry frequently takes the form of an party invitation set to verse.

the Villa Del Sole. Her love of poetry frequently takes the form of an party invitation set to verse.

As highly as they value their privacy, the Marshalls have not hesitated to open their home countless times to groups for fund-raising benefits or house tours. They have entertained hundreds of guests for the Valley Opera Association, Children's Home Society, the Livermore-Amador Valley Symphony Guild, Valley Memorial Hospital.

In September alone the Marshalls will welcome the Pleasanton Juniors, the Y-Wives and guests of the St. Augustine's Women's Club gustine's Women's Club.

The TIMES POOL & PATIO PAGE ● POOLS ● PATIOS ● RELATED SERVICES

There are lots of hot summer days still ahead for those of us living in the Amador Valley - and plenty of time to enjoy our own backyard swimming pool. And for those who didn't plan ahead and do not have a pool —

It is possible to install inground pools (gunite) within 30 calendar days, and that means you still have plenty of summer swimming left. It's not too late to enjoy the family fun of well-planned swimming pool or spa.

The pleasures of your own pool don't end with a cooling dip into the pool. There are many more reasons why you will enjoy having your own "swimming hole."

A well-planned pool adds greatly to the beauty of your home, and lush landscaping can spread this cooling effect throughout the entire yard. When you add such things as a gas bar-b-q, lounging chairs, patio shade areas, and an adequate sunning area, you have a haven away from the rest of the world.

Find a family who uses the pool regularly and you will find a healthy, happy group of people enjoying each other, and at home. Pools are family oriented, and while they are not a cure-all for all family ills, they are very helpful in maintaining a close relationship. You might say that a family that swims together stays together.

If you have trouble maintaining a regular exercise schedule, try mixing it with fun activity such as swimming. Leading educators agree that swimming is one of the best body conditioning exercises.

A very good friend of mine swims several laps each morning before his shower, and another few laps after work — and he will talk your arm off about how much better he feels.

Many housewives plan some of their day in the pool, both for pleasure and for the exercise we all need.

Combine this with the purely pleasureable swimming with friends and children, and you have another reason why your own backyard pool should be ordered now.

Get a good tan. Lay in the sun or shade. Watch the cooling water. Quit mowing the backyard grass. Learn how to dive. Enjoy the bikini-clad girls. Have a party. Or, think up your own reason, but if a pool is in your future — don't hesitate, do it now.

The concept of soaking in hot, bubbling waters ranging in temperature from 95 to 110 degrees (or warmer or cooler, as desired), is not a new one. Soaking baths have long been a com-munal custom in Japan. Natural hot springs in the U.S. or abroad have been established watering places, or spas, for elite health and relaxation seekers since

The hot tub craze that is now sweeping California — and as a natural result, beginning to catch on all over the country—is a product of mans' early discovery of his natural affinity for the soothing benefits of hot water bathing.

The spa package retains the original naturalness of a rustic hand-hewn red-wood tank that fits and blends with the outdoor environment in which it is most often used. In addition, they have developed and refined an integrated support system that provides the best method of enjoying a hot-tub. A high-recovery heater enables the user to heat the water to the desired temperature quickly. A reliable pump and filtering system alongs and circulates the water. Since the dawn of homo sapiens, man has tried to influence the weather. At long last, it appears he is succeeding. And one of the companies in the forefront of that research is MBAssociates of San Ramon. Just recently, MBA was awarded a $180,000 initial contract for first phase development of a snow augmentation in the Sierras, and the company is also hoping to get involved in areas such as rain stimulation and hail suppres-

Dr. Tony Lovell of MBA worked for the National Center for Atmospheric Research until six months ago and he concedes that meteorology the study of weather) is "the baby of the hard sciences".

But for that reason, advances are often rapid and spectacular.

MBAssociates is hopeful that its snow augmentation program will be one of them. Snow augmentation is just that — getting more snow to fall from a cloud than would naturally. If more snow can be induced to fall on the Sierras, not only will skiing be better, but water supplies for Central Valley agriculture and drinking will be assured.

Already, 18 snow augmentation programs are in operation in California, but no one has yet done a detailed study to see if the programs are working and if so, why.

Weather control — of which snow augmentation is but a part - is one of the most difficult feats man has ever attempted, and also potentially one of the most dangerous.

The reason for its difficulty is basic — you can't get a full-sized Pacific storm in a laboratory. The only place a scientist can study weather is in it, and it's often difficult to tell whether an action has any

For example, a scientist can seed a cloud with silver iodide and then it might rain. But it might have rained anyway without the silver iodide, so it's difficult to tell if any practical results took place.

Petaluma housing limits

Bay cities hail court land rule

By CATHY TALLYN Times Staff Writer

ALNUT CREEK — Central county city officials are applauding a court decision that holds that cities do have substantial land use powers.

The U.S. Court of Appeals this week upheld the constitutionality of Petaluma's imposing a five-year housing lim-This reversed a U.S. District Court decision of about 1½ years ago con-cerning the city's limiting new housing to 500 units a year for five years. The city sought to get orderly and attractive development through use of the plan. Local officials are studying just what impact this will have, but most agree it's an important decision that seems to reinforce the concept of local control. Steve Billington, Lafayette planning director, said the ruling will make small cities much more comfortable with the various kinds of mechanisms that each has developed. It also clarifies the breadth of police power cities have, Billington said. Peter Rule, Moraga Planning Commission chairman said, the decision "certainly sounds like cities have the right to control their own destiny ..

The decision would be beneficial to any city ... arguing against the (idea) of the unlimited right to build.'

Rule added, "Moraga incorporated to control its own destiny rather than have the county control it.

"I don't think that necessarily says Moraga doesn't want no growth .... We just want a choice in the growth." At this time it has "no significant effect" on the city because it's "not doing anything to limit building permits,' Moraga planner Dave Baker said. Moraga is also in the process of writing its general plan so the total impact of the decision won't be known until the plan is finished and implemented, Bak-

Moraga Vice Mayor Michael Cory said the ruling might just be "one more avenue to control development" and give the town a legal precedent if it decided to limit the number of homes that could be built.

Walnut Creek Mayor Peg Kovar said, 'I'm pleased with the decision because if Petaluma wants to use that approach, they should be allowed to do so. "We gave some support to Petaluma, but we haven't chosen to use that

Mrs. Kovar said the situations in Petaluma and Walnut Creek aren't really

"Walnut Creek's growth came in the approach is through open space, good planning and planning tools such as Walnut Creek's City Manager, Thomas Dunne, thinks if the ruling is sustained it will affect all the cities in the The 9th Court of Appeals is the second highest court in the land. The U.S. Supreme Court is the last court of appeal.

There is some speculation whetherthere will be an appeal of the decision to the Supreme Court.

Dunne said he hopes the appelatecourt ruling is not used "as a vehicle to either discriminate or ignore the rights and interests of citizens who may not presently be residents of our city. Clayton and Concord are two other cities that don't think the court decision will have any great impact.

Dick Stockwell, Concord's assistant city manager, said, "Most cities are doing a certain amount of growth control through one mechanism or anoth-

Clayton City Manager Ron Brazill explained the city is revising its general plan to lower the density for development both within the city and its sphere of influence.

Just what will result in the unincorporated land in the county isn't certain Allan Petersdorf, superintendent of the San Ramon Valley Unified School District, one of only two legal bodies in the San Ramon Valley, said if anything is done as a result of the ruling it would be at a county level.

Unincorporated land falls under the jurisdiction of the county.

The San Ramon Valley is one of the largest chunks of unincorporated land with space for development in the cen-

To contend with the fast pace of development in the area that's filling the schools to capacity, the district has adopted a bedroom tax on new homes to pay for new classrnoms. Petersdorf said if the county chose to limit growth as a result of the Petaluma ruling, he hoped it would allow the district to keep the tax.

"We'd still require some assistance. There'd still be some impact on our schools," he said.

Petersdorf said he could see another problem if new homes were limited to 500 units per year, for example.

Many developers come into the San Ramon Valley with much larger plans, Petersdorf said.

The Blackhawk Ranch development alone will ultimately have 4,200 homes, if all goes according to plan. The superintendent questioned what would happen if one developer came in with a plan for 499 homes. Ken Frank, one of the organizers of a group attempting to create a city out of the San Ramon Valley, said this ruling might give voters one more reason to approve incorporation 'If we incorporated, it would be possible to control growth," he said.

The county planning director is on vacation and unavailable for comment at this time, his office said.

Petaluma standard for the nation?

The "constitutional question" raised by one community's determination to "control its own destiny and its growth rate" is one that will only be resolved by a careful finding of the United States Supreme Court. A clear decision by that body — if such is forthcoming — could change America's living habits as nothing has since those early-day land rushes, or the following right to homestead.

We are a people that places great value on our residency — our right to live in familial privacy, in the dwelling, neighborhood, and community of our choice. It was because Black America felt it was were being denied that "freedom of choice" that we went through some of this nation's most trying periods, and brought forth our most far-reaching changes in law.

Now the "right" of an individual (in reality a great number of individuals) to settle and build in a community such as Petaluma is being challenged by the resident majority. "People must have the privilege of preserving their community's natural scene ... of setting reasonable limits on growth," the jurists have stated. There remains a tremendous argument as to just what is the "natural scene" and therefore how "reasonable limits" might be imposed. This valley experienced something of that debate in the great SAVE initiative. The courts are still out on that one.

The nation's highest court may have to go out even further in trying to set standards that will allow Americans once comfortably settled into their own community collective — to then decide how many more "newcomers" will be allowed to share that scene. We can be sure that whatever leeway in this regard is given to Petaluma, California, will be quickly copied by rural and suburban hamlets from Livermore to Half Moon Bay, and then across the state and the nation in a growing swell of home town

If we can look past — just for the moment - our own concerns over "too much growth," it is easy to conjure up a national picture of self-satisfied pockets of humanity, unwilling and unable to move with the challenge of laissez faire that has always been America's stand-

We do not say that is all bad. Certainly there are enough faults with the old yardstick for "boom or bust" to cry out for drastic change. But there is also ample evidence that the pattern of growth and movement that has always been the measure of our freedom, and our unique technological success, is now being challenged as never before.

The big cities are dieing. The urban slurb is being resisted for a hundred economic and sociological and racial reasons. The suburbs are the last stand for those Americans who see the fruit of their labor in the home, the block and the community of their choice, as of the day they chose it.

It is that "constitutional right" which is now headed for the nation's highest court. Something much more than a limit on new sewer connections will flow from that decision.

EPA gets too big

Has the EPA — the Environmental Protection Agency — grown a little too big for its breeches? Or it it that its breeches — its regulatory powers were made too extensive in the first

It has always, of course, been advisable to take both the claims of the environmentalists and the counter-claims of their antagonists with more than a few grains of salt, although most Americans would probably prefer to err, if err we must, on the side of caution when it comes to their health and well-being.

Lately, however, the EPA has been coming under increasing fire, and it is coming from Capitol Hill as well as the hustings, and from impartial scientists as well as spokesmen for the chemical and other industries that have been most affected by the agency's decisions.

For example, a committee of the prestigious National Academy of Sciences recently concluded that "there is no convincing evidence that chemical pesticides can be replaced in the forseeable

"To the extent that regulation of agricultural chemicals is unnecessarily restrictive and sluggish in its administration, new research aimed at safer and more effective pest and disease control chemicals will be discouraged; and, over phe long haul, the public will be the loser.

Already, it says, one effect of government regulation has been to put all but the larger companies in a situation where research costs are beyond their

The house Agricultural Committee has given up its pesticide control program. "They are unreasonable and arbitrary," one member was quoted as saying, "and this is the only way we can apparently bring them to look at what they are doing.

During one session of the committee, Rep. Floyd J. Fithian (D-Ind.), told an EPA official that "I am concerned, as an environmentalist and a conservationist, that in the process of overstripping the balance of the legislation which created your agency you may kill the goose that lays the golden eggs ... I am concerned as a conservationist about what you people are doing to the conservation movement in this country.'

At the same time, there are reports of unrest in the lower ranks of the agency itself — too much politics and too little attention to the interests of the public.

There have been suggestions that a separate agency be set up to review EPA actions. Whether or not the cause of environmental protection requires yet another layer of government, whatever steps may be necessary should be taken to ensure that the wide authority granted such a vital agency as the EPA not be abused, misused, or possibily in some cases, unused.

The week in retrospect

Time to exit BART?

If the Bay Area Rapid Transit District does not maintain the approximate level of feeder bus service linking the valley with the metropolitan area after Sept. 30 I believe the three valley communities should immediately consider getting out of the district and contracting for service with AC Transit.

This is based on three reasons: valley taxpayers have been paying in for years and getpayers have been paying in for years and getting nothing until nine months ago, a system of inter-metropolitan and intra-valley public transit is needed now, and a functioning BART rail line to the valley is doubtful much before the year 2000.

Though it is considerably smaller in population and land area than the valley, Concord is contracting with AC Transit to run seven routes, six days a week between Concord neighborhoods, the BART station and Sun Valley Regional Shopping Center.

Service will start Monday, Sept. 8 and is in addition to the BART feeder buses that link the station with outlying Contra Costa County

the station with outlying Contra Costa County

Fremont and Newark, whose population is about equal to the valley total, did it a different way. By a vote of the public, they annexed to the AC Transit District. The lines, like the ones being inaugurated in Concord, are predominantly tied to BART activity
The Concord and Fremont situations differ greatly from the valley in one respect....both have BART stations in their midst. We do not and as opined at the outset it's doubtful if any will materialize much before the year 2000.

It's really a matter of BART finances and the valley being at the bottom of the priority list for BART extension lines. The latter is caused by the small population along any such line as compared with the Contra Costa, Southern and Northern Alameda County

I believe we must look to buses and special bus lanes as our solution to transit problems for the remainder of this century.

Paramount in this consideration is not only continuation of present bus links to the metropolitan area but intra-valley service. The latter can be established within a couple years, if not sooner, and give the approximately 106,000 residents door-step to store and school service.

If BART chooses to curtail or eliminate feeder bus service, we will again have the mantel of second-class citizenship put on our shoulders. We deserve much, much better

We are paying for it!
The time has come to make the decision. First-class service now or remove BART's tentacles from this valley

We have noted in recent days the AC drivers on lines out to the valley (from Hayward) diligently recording the number of people getting on and off at various stops. This presumably will be incorporated into a report that BART directors will consider when they make a determination on the corriectors. make a determination on the service come next month.

Should service be curtailed or eliminated (and I doubt the latter will occur), it should signal the organization of a valley-wide committee (with legal counsel) to determine an appropriate and speedy way out of the

I believe grounds exist now, no matter what BART may decide, for either contracting with AC for intra-valley service or put-ting it on the ballot (to join the AC Transit District).

This writer has been in contact with a half-dozen cities, from Walnut Creek to San Carlos to Modesto, to see how they are solving their respective public transit problems. To date, we have found that all are gaining greater public acceptance with each passing

This is reflected not only in the fare box but with proposals, such as in Walnut Creek, for an extension of service (routes and hours).

I believe civic leaders in Livermore, Pleas-anton and Dublin should update their efforts toward establishing some form of intra-valley service.
It should be done with an awareness that the feeder bus system is a stop-gap effort aimed largely at taking commuters to the metropolitan area. This does not solve the overall need for transit for those who work, go to school and shop in the valley.

Until we get a complete and total system covering this valley, we have not gotten our money's worth.

Limit growth

Editor, The Times:

A survey of valley residents reportedly indicated that they would like the populated areas to remain the same size they are now. They prefer small towns, clean air, open space and not much industrial development.

Many of us realize that limitless ex cannot continue either locally or nationally .. The sooner we begin to limit expansion the less traumatic the adjustment will be as we bump against the ultimate limits of our

The three new street lights (on Wall Street in Livermore) have been in since the middle of June. They seem to be accomplishing what we had in mind. With the warm evenings of late many of us have been sharing the good company of each other (front yard style) and the lights have made this more pleasant. ... This is the line up of help we had: the City Council and Staff, the Planning Commission, the news media (thank God for you), the Police Department, the Granada Vice-Principal and student body, a School Board member, the Sonoma Principal, all of our neighbors, and even neighbors from nearby streets.

We sincerely appreciake the City Council for meeting some of our present needs on Wall Street. A special thanks to Mayor Archer Futch and Councilman Dale Turner ...

A special thanks to Ron Lindgren, Chief of Police, who is a very sensitive humane kind of person. He gave us unwavering support right to the very end ... all I can say about S.T.E.P. is — Boy we needed you then and we need you now! Special thanks to Detectives Don Lee and Dave Hollander.

I would like to thank the Times for it's undying support. You really know what being a newspaper's all about. You're a true asset to this valley.

A very special thanks to Karel Kramer, whom I met the first time I spoke to the City Council ... Her support was always there in print. Thanks Karel.

I also must say that whenever I went into the Times building I was treated with the ut-most courtesy and respect.

School coverage

(The following was addressed to Al Fischer of The Times' editorial staff)

In your newspaper account of special board meeting to study the elementary budget you said "nary a person" was present. Just to tell you I was there and other lady sitting next to you was Laura Maxwell, new president of Harvest Park PTA.

I have just received three of last week's Times. Thoroughly enjoyed Hind-sight/Foresight (Last budget) Aug. 6 and Focus (Any $$ in storm) Aug. 8. You take such care to explain financial situation & peoples' rights to people of Pleasanton. You may feel at times like the only "watchdog" but please, please keep speaking out & loud. Mary Eveleth

New restaurants

Editor: The Times:

Thank goodness! Some new restaurants are coming to Pleasanton!

No competition has been "killing" this. town long enough! Hurrah for progress!

Mrs. L.H. Johnson

There was that day when I prepared my firstpiece of "news copy" for a weekly publication in Britisl Columbia's lush dairy country ... and I wondered how hey fed that piece of paper into the "typesetting machies" in order to produce the lines that made up each age of that day's press run. Some three decades later, would retrain myself in order to produce news copy tht was indeed fed directly into a computer, to produce the type that produced the pages for each day's editions.

It has also taken me that long to discover that thre is no talent in newspapering so strange as to be rejected without a trial, no young reporter who does not habor that burning desire to be "the world's greatest jounal-

I would be hard pressed, if asked today, to decid if my years of servitude in this business were highlighed by the millions of words set into type, or by the repeters and printers who brought those words to life, and not to the pages of ten thousand weekly and daily editios. The people who make it happen are as interesting as te stories they produce.

All of this comes to mind today as we prepare to sen yet another promising young journalist "out into th

Pat Widder wasn't exactly a novice when she came to Pleasanton and The Times in 1970. She had been buffet ed by the Winds of Fourth Estate from Mountain View to Sunnyvale before scurrying to the lee side of the Bay .. "wondering if newspaper work is really for me." Five years later, the world of print can be grateful that Pat has decided to stick it out.

Only from henceforth it will be the suburbs of Chicago rather than the outer regions of San Francisco Bay that will set Ms. Widder's keys to rumbling; and her fingers will fly under the mast head of THE CHICAGO TRI-BUNE rather than THE TIMES of valley fame.

"After five years of covering city hall and the great sewer story, I think I could write that report in my sleep ... and when I actually started to do just that, I figured it was maybe time for a change of scene." Pat had just a touch of tear in her eye as we spoke, and I must admit that my own composure was not at it's administrative best during our "time for decision" chat. One does not cover the happenings of people and the transformation of places over a vibrant half decade without fashioning strong bonds with those who share in the compilation of

"I have my doctor's degree in language, and I have been working with Encyclopedia Brittanica for the past several years," the string-bean young man said as he towered above my desk. "But I have always wanted to write for a newspaper, and I figured I would have to start small." The fact that "what you pay me, if at all, is of no significance" softened my pride over that "starting small" thing, and I took him on. Robert Hora-tio Whitehead was therefore to become the very first fulltime reporter hired in recorded Pleasanton history.

There had, of course, been others before ... but they had been of the two-headed and even three-headed variety ... people who kept the books, sold an occasional ad, folded papers in a pinch. News gathering was always secondary to that essential role of rural newspapering — to survive.

The memory is still vivid (and a trifle shell-shocked) of Hazel Silva's reign over doings at The Times. She was keeper of the cash, telephone contact to the news-making world, a recorder of classifieds and a promoter of commercial printing. Hazel could accept partial payment from a delinquent customer in English. while blasting that poor soul in Portuguese for failing to come up with the balance. It was years before I learned that my bi-lingual girl Friday was a bill collector of extraordinary talent.

There was, a few years later, the young man who convinced me that he had all the journalistic talent in the world (particularly at the offered $55 per week), without his ever volunteering, or my ever thinking to ask if he could type. He prepared his stories in copious long hand, took the notes home to his faithful wife, and brought back the typewritten stories without a single flaw. I would think the San Francisco dailies could profit from such a family approach to preparing story

There is not one of us in this news-gathering business that does not profit ... from the fascinating scene that is our particular beat, from the ebb and flow of human emotion as we approach life's obstacles, and from the in-house pride that comes with a story well written, an issue boldly presented, a victory hard won.

In five years of servitude in this vale, Pat Widder had stood out among her peers in presenting the story well, and in keeping the fine edge of reader interest above her own private opinion. She is a fine reporter, and we will hold the editors of the Chicago Tribune personally responsible for using her talents to the full.

I sure hope they don't assign her to the city sewer

The race is on, my friends, but the entries are in the paddock and out of sight. Take a measure of Irene Vincent. Add to that a small dash of Joyce LeClaire. Pour in a volatile dabble of Helen Tirsell. Mix in a jigger of Gloria Carr. Fill the glass with a large portion of Valerie Raymond and serve piping hot. Who says its a man's world? Even my male chauvinistic pig tie and special imported can of blarney repellant will not protect me from the knowledge that a covey of names like the one above is pretty formidable. They are, by the way, only a few of the names of lassies I have heard may be seeking the First District seat in the campaign for Alameda County Supervisor.

To date there is only one sure fire candidate and that is Valerie Raymond, a proponent of the anti-growth ideas of one Don Miller and a determined woman in her own right.

Folks say she has been campaigning for the last year. I maintain she has been campaigning since 1971. Valerie was knocked down by one Don (John D.) Murphy during the 1972 campaign for supervisor.
As far as she is concerned, it was down but not out.

Murphy never took her seriously. Warned by a campaign worker she might come as close as 200 votes to him he replied that if she did she could have the seat. There have been a lot of names popped in and out of the hopper since Murphy indicated he was not sure he would run for re-election Most of those on this side of the valley are women. The only man mentioned prominently is Ron Hyde, Dublin businessman and a member of the Valley Community Services District Board of Directors. Across the ridge a variety of men's names pop in and out of the race, all of them without any solid basis of Leon Mezzetti, Fremont's energetic Volkswagen dealer, eases in and out of supervisorial talks about as often as anyone.

Leon has been seen at the Lorelei restaurant more than once recently in earnest conversation with Murphy, his administrative assistant, Rudy Dettenrieder, and one Harry Querner, owner of the restaurant.

A man can't be sure what that means. Perhaps they all just like German foods. Rudy, who once owned an interest in the place, is qualfied on that score. Murphy is the corned beef and cabbage type. Gene Rhodes, a Fremont attorney and member of the city council there since 1964, has also been mentioned. It is no secret that Rhodes has long harbored the hope that he might hold a political post larger than the one he occupies in the sprawling city on the other side of the

Thus far he has always been frustrated by circumstances There is some reason to think circumstances will once again thwart his ambition.

Irene Vincent, an energetic and highly capable woman, is the sister of Gene's former wife. She and Gene are close friends and it is unlikely that he would put himself in the position of campaigning against her in a supervisorial race.

Don Dillon's name is one which cannot be overlooked. Dillon, a truly happy man, has had about everything go his way all his life.

He is the owner of the Four Winds Nursery in Fremont, one of the most successful enterprises in the entire San Francisco Bay Area.

Don raises dwarf citrus trees and has just about cornered the market in the entire United States. He has, through careful laboratory research and techniques, developed every type and size of fruit producing dwarf citrus anyone could want and produces them by the thousands.

Just in case he wants to take the time, he has all of it he wants for the job of county supervisor. There is every reason to believe Don might pick up a lot of votes here in the valley and could be elected. He has been mayor of Fremont more times than I can count and a member of the city council since 1958. That is a tenure extending back to just two years after the city was incorporated

But the going might not be all beer and skittles in Fremont. Even an easy going and likeable character like Dillon is bound to make some enemies after holding office 17 years.

Anyway, the people in the know claim Dillon is not interested in the job and that even if he is he will never run against Murphy On this side of the hill the name of John Stanley has emerged from the mist. I mean the Livermore resident and son of Chester Stanley, not Pleasanton's PG&E Stanley is toying with the idea of campaigning. He will wait for a while before making up his mind. Certainly until after Murphy has made an announcement. The election of Stanley would be interesting. His father, Chester, died in office after holding the post 16 years. Murphy followed him, having been appointed to fill the post by Governor Edmund G. (Pat) Brown Meanwhile Murphy is tight lipped. There is a lot of speculation over his silence. "So Don says he isn't going to run. That makes it a cinch he will," one well scarred veteran of county politi-cal wars declared Thursday.

If Murphy runs the face of the campaign will change. If not we have one hell of a dogfight in store. Catfight? I wouldn't want to insult the ladies.

About the only job opportunity remaining for youngsters without college diplomas is professional basket-

A whole lot of kids barely old enough to drive have found it quite lucrative since the pros agreed on a set of self-serving, pompous "hardship" guidelines to draft

Now, before a young man has taken enough math to read all the zeroes on his bonus check, he's thrown into Madison Square Garden to perform for drunken mobs of 20,000. How's that for catering to the mental health of

It's doubtful the trend towards teenage professionals will be stemmed soon. It would take a merger of the two pro leagues, or a sudden distaste for millions of dollars on the part teenagers to halt the practice. Don't bet on

But as long as they keep on plucking kids right out of freshman English, someone ought to insist they be given crash courses in public relations.

Too many youngsters reach the big leagues in sports unprepared for the slavering spies of the press. They are baffled and intimidated by the questions, and often wind up embittered

Bill Walton had four years at a major university to prepare for sports writers who wanted to know how the zone press affected world-wide detente, or if the sky-hook was the path to spiritual contemplation.

But he emerged from the hallowed halls ill-prepared for the onslaught. Now he and the media have become almost natural enemies, like the cobra and the mon-

Walton, like his predecessor Lew Alcindor, dominated college basketball for John Wooden at UCLA. They were both reclusive individuals, harbored from the press by their coach.

Now they are two of sport's mystery men. Big Bill chooses to remain that way. He is jealous of his privacy, says Reina Whitney, the life-long friend of the family who grew up in San Diego, but lives now in

By her account, Bill was probably aimed on a collision course with the press all along. Athletic heroes are expected to open the doors to their inner life for the public, but Bill could never do that. He was always too private. At UCLA he would only eat at an inconspicuous diner where the patrons would ignore him, and the cooks would serve his daily breakfast of six eggs with-

Neither Bill or his family sought out public notice. But at 6-11, Reina points out, there's no place to hide.

Walton has become a mark for sports writers since emerging from Wooden's nest, like King Kong in the sights of a byplane pilot. They've made the big red-head their challenge, and he resents it.

Reina theorizes that Bill's recent political outbursts against America grew out of his disenchantment. "It's like he's saying 'if this is what they want, this is what I'll give them,'" Reina explains.

Walton was praised as the greatest player of all-time during his college career. They had to dream up new superlatives at the start of each season.
That all changed last Fall, however, when he began his first season with the Portland Trailblazers. Walton spent most of the season injured, and on the bench. Fans and writers questioned his desire, and his integrity. They marvelled that a multi-million dollar center would cop out because his ankle hurt a little.

Bill became defensive, and me jibes became sharper. Then came to light his association with sports revolutionary Jack Scott, the man whose name was tied in with Patricia Hearst and the SLA. Things grew worse. Whether or not Walton was connected with the noto-rious kidnap victim (and it seems highly doubtful) he aligned himself with the SLA camp by denouncing American justice, and American politics.

People equated his radical ideologies with the SLA, and instantly linked the two.

Since then Walton has been the subject of FBI surveillance. He is being dogged more severely than he was as a lucious basketball prospect at Helix High

"He feels there isn't a phone call he can make that someone isn't listening to," says Reina Whitney. Once recently Walton phoned a friend in Santa Barbara to inquire about a couple of books Bill wanted to read.

The next day, according to Reina, the Feds were grilling Walton's Santa Barbara aquaintance.

"He doesn't have to pay for any long distance phone calls though," she adds with a smile; "so he sort of Walton's parents have felt the pressure, Mrs. Whitney says. Recently Gloria Walton mailed Reina a post card from Hawaii, saying she and her husband had flown there, "to escape harrassment you wouldn't

The parents don't abide by Walton's current political beliefs, Reina says. But they are convinced he is in no way implicated with Patty Hearst or the SLA.

Mrs. Walton's concern, instead, is for her son's safe-ty. There are always kooks who will carry their criticism one step too far.

"If I was Gloria, I would be worried about Bill disappearing," says Reina.

Ironically, the one time Walton really sent shivers through the family came two years ago when he was taking summer classes at Sonoma State University. He was stung by a bee while on a biking trip, and suffered a violent allergic reaction. Walton also charges that the press has proven a threat to his friends, and as a result, he has become even more protective.

Bill won't even reveal the last name of his girl friend Suzie, says Reina, nor will he permit interviews or photographs.

The two lived in Walton's secluded $100,000 home out of Portland, until it was sold recently.

Since then, her picture did appear in a Walton feature in "Sport" magazine. That doesn't mean Walton is easing his hard line, however, as far as keeping the public outside his gate. Bill figures the Trailblazers pay him to play bas-ketball, Reina says.

He didn't sign on to be a poster boy.

CC pays for mistakes, 13-7

astrous mid-week intrasquad scrimmage turned its backfield into a refuge for the walking wounded it was assumed that the Alameda County All-Star team would be no match for Contra Costa and its powerful air attack.

With the heralded duo of Theotis Brown and Steve Noon nagged by injuries, Ala-meda would be unable to produce enough punch for a victory. Wrong.

For awhile the CC Riders did outgain Alameda, 241-164, they also provided their blue and gold clad opponents with a plethora of breaks and made the mistake of getting caught in compromising situations a little too often.

The result was a 13-7 win for Alameda in the 10th annual renewal of the emotion-charged benefit game before a less-than-capacity crowd at Tak Fudenna Stad-

Contra Costa players and coaches spent much of the night pleading with the offi-cials whose decisions left the Riders on the short end of a 147-68 penalty yardage gap. But the first score of the game came on what could only be described as a gift from CC to old, starting quarterback DeVallon Harper went back to punt for CC. With plenty of time to get the kick away, Harper stepped into the ball and sliced it out-of-bounds at a wicked angle for a net of four yards.

Six plays later Noon, who held to 2.6 yards-per-carry, crawled over from one yard out with a good second-effort and with 9:14 to play in the first quarter Alameda led 6-0. The extra point try was erased when Clayton Valley's Wayne Harrison slashed through the Alameda line and smashed the ball back to the ground.

The scoreless second quarter served as a spotlight for Livermore grad Ron Foreman. Playing in the same secondary with standouts Andre Williams (McClymonds) and Frank Rogers (Berkeley), the 5-10 former Cowboy was clearly Alameda's top defensive back; with only DeAnza's Greg Bracelin rivalling him

With 1:41 to play in the half Foreman gave Alameda an odds-on scoring chance when he picked off an errant Danny Hartwig pass and returned it 37 yards to the Rider 3-yard

"As soon as he threw it," Foreman recounted, "I started playing the ball; it was almost like being a receiver. "Then I guess my instincts took over," he said of his dash up from the middle of the field toward the left side of the end zone that fell an agonizing nine feet short.

"I was more afraid on that one because he had a step on me," Ron said in comparing his two spectacular efforts. Perhaps because of his conspicous success, Contra Costa threw very few times to Fore-man's side during the game.

On the succeeding play, quarterback Drew Field hit Charles Hill for a 39-yard passing gain to within smelling distance of the end zone. It was called back due to offsetting penalties. But Brown, who lumbered for just 3.8 yards-per-carry in 17 tries, came up with three straight tackle-breaking runs to set up a one-yard sneak by former Skyline teammate Field for the TD. This time Mike Duckworth's point-after attempt was good.

The Riders got their only score with less than a minute to play in the game.

With 1:18 to go, Chronister, who will attend Diablo Valley College, took the ball from a mob including Alameda defenders Williams and Rogers for a 41-yard gain from Hartwig to the two. From that advantageous
